STORY OF

THE GENESIS AND PROGRESS OF WESTERN CAROLINA TEACHERS' COLLEGE

ANY times I have been asked the question, "Why did you have faith to believe that a permanent State institution could be evolved from a high school situated in a remote section eight miles from the nearest railroad station?"

Well, the answer is found in the early history of two nationally known institutions that developed in Lexington, Va., where I spent my boyhood. Washington and Lee University started in Rockbridge County as an academy, founded by Revolutionary patriots, who changed its name to Washington College in honor of George Washington and received from him its first endowment fund. The Virginia Military Institute with which "Stonewall" Jackson was connected before the War between the States and in which my father, Col. R. L. Madison, M.D., served as surgeon before and after that war, started as a regional arsenal with a small State appropriation and in 1839 was converted into the V.M.I. Lexington, at the inception of these schools, was an isolated locality without

roads. "What man has done man can do again."

When I arrived in this part of North Carolina, more than 53 years ago, this section was just being penetrated by a railway. Roads were little better than trails. Log houses for schools and dwellings were rapidly being displaced by frame houses as saw-mills were being introduced. The chief industries were farming, lumbering, and mining. The educational outlook was far from encouraging: public schools were open for only three or four months a year; school houses, log or frame, were shabby, uncomfortable, and utterly inadequate; teachers' pay ranged from $15 to $25 a month; and, worst of all, many of the teachers were incompetent. Furthermore, public sentiment relative to education was at a low ebb in most of the mountain communities.

Shortly after my arrival in Jackson County I began teaching in the Qualla community (near Whittier). I taught there for two years, trying to establish a school adequate to the needs of a wide area. Unsuccessful in that attempt, I went to Sylva, then a small village, and taught there for eighteen months WASHINGTON while marking time till I could find a locality favorable to the establishment of the kind of school that I had in mind. I was convinced that such an institution was > absolutely essential not only to fit young people better for fuller life and more remunerative livelihood but also to prepare better teachers for the country and village public schools.

O. Hicks, A. M. Dawson, P. R. Young, and Atlee Long. These longterm school furnished the best equipped instructors for the larger INSPIRED BY AND JACKSON district public

PROF. R. L. MADISON Up to 1889, there Aroun from an Early Photograph by Melba Fowler was not in this State, and probably in no other Southern State, any public institution preparing teachers for country public schools. Having observed that the few capable public school teachers were those who had attended private high schools, I saw there the only immediate hope of improving the quality of public school teaching. And the people, recognizing the services rendered by the better prepared public school teachers, were, here and there, extending the brief public school term by private subscriptions. Each of the mountain counties had had one or more private or Peabody schools taught by superior teachers such as John schools, but seldom continued in the same neighborhood longer than from three to five years. The scholarship of the average public school teacher was little above that of his advanced pupils. Such were the conditions here in the 1870's and the 1880's.

My first visit to the Cullowhee section was on a Sunday morning in the early springtime of 1889. I was a delegate to a Sunday School Convention to be held, under the supervision of the Rev. Frank Siler, at the Speedwell Methodist Church situated in the heart of lovely Cullowhee Valley. I rode horseback from Sylva, where I had been serving as teacher and county newspaper editor.

On my way, I stopped at the Cullowhee Baptist Church (near the site of the present new building) and was approached by Ro> land A. Painter, who was the first person to suggest or solicit my coming to Cullowhee to teach.

The following July, from the 22nd to the 27th, Superintendent Edward P. Moses, of the

Raleigh City Schools, LILA SCHOOL, JACKSON conducted at Webster a

Teachers. I was one of the attendants and was greatly profited and inspired by the lectures of the scholarly and distinguished educator. Such was his impress and influence upon me that I experienced a fresh and more profound conviction that teaching was my destined career if I desired success and satisfaction; so I resolved, God willing, to remain in this region and to do my best to begin supplying the very real educational needs of the mountain boys and girls within what, at first, would necessarily be a limited area. My brief contact with that magnetic teacher from Raleigh was undoubtedly a decisive factor in my further educational endeavors in these heavenly highlands. The evening before he left, Superintendent Moses invited me to an after-supper walk. We went leisurely down the road to the river, crossed on the quaint old covered bridge, and strolled thence to the top of River Hill. My part of the conversation consisted chiefly of answers to his questions as to my boyhood life, my training, my experience, and my purposes. Returning, we had retraced our steps across the bridge when he stopped and with startling suddenness, inquired: "How would you like to teach for me in Raleigh?"

With mingled feelings of surprise, pleasure, and embarrassment, I thanked him and expressed the fear that I might fail to justify his expectations. He be spent in the hills of my adopted State. However, on resurveying my chosen territory, I found no available opening. Webster, Cullowhee, and Glenville apparently were supplied for another year. Reluctantly, I concluded that my plans were being providentially over-ruled and that the call to Raleigh was unmistakable proof. Consequently, acting on impulse, I sat at my office desk, Friday morning, August 2, and penned a letter of acceptance to Superintendent Moses, my intention being to mail it, within a few minutes, on the eastbound train.

Just then, Hon. Lewis J. Smith, of Cullowhee, who had been a patron of my school at Sylva, paid me a visit. He had come to invite me to teach at Cullowhee, saying that the way was open and the people there wanted me. He persuaded me to postpone my letter to Raleigh and meanwhile to visit his home and to confer with leading citizens of that neighborhood. I yielded and, as a result, I met a representative group of men, next day, at the public school house. We soon concluded arrangements for me to begin teaching there the following week.

Accordingly, in an unfinished, unpainted frame building, unfurnished except for some rude benches and a blackboard, I began what is now Western Carolina Teachers' College, with eighteen students, nine of whom later graduated and fourteen of whom are still living. By October, 1889, the attendance had so greatly increased that I engaged my sister, Marguerite, to instruct the younger children for the remainder of the session. The first year (ten months) closed with an enrollment of 100.

A music and Art Department was added for the second year and a special building erected for its use. Miss Ella V. Richards, of Elizabeth, N. J., (formerly of Galveston, Texas,) was chosen as teacher of fine arts. This department was the first of its kind ever organized west of Asheville. Miss May Belle Cooper, a graduate of Asheville Female College, served as primary teacher that session.

The Legislature of 1891 granted Cullowhee High School a charter and under it the school was organized as a corporate body. Then began the devoted and inestimable services of the "Noble Nine" as Trustees: William Wilson, D. D. Davies, Thomas A. Cox, R. Hamilton Brown, J. David Coward, William C. Norton, Lewis J. Smith, Robert L. Watson, and William A. Henson. These public-spirited men and their equally public spirited and self-sacrificing wives deserve to be perpetually honored and held in grateful remembrance by all who value this college or who have received or may receive benefits therefrom. Today survive only two of these notable men, Thomas A. Cox and William C. Norton, with their faithful wives.

In November, 1891, Miss Richards and I were married and shortly thereafter began housekeeping in a building near the school. It had been erected and occupied by Elijah Chastain, former owner of the "Town

farm. David dwelling, now remodeled, is occupied at present by Mr. L. A. Ammon, manager of the college farm and is the oldest building on the college campus.

Came the winter of 1893, with the State General Assembly in session at Raleigh. Cullowhee High School was in its fourth success-The enrollment had about ful year. doubled; students were attending from all parts of the county, from adjoining counties, and even from South Carolina; and our first graduating class was progressing toward its May-time goal. Ihad been striving earnestly for nearly four years to give this section the best school it had ever had, and its reputation was spreading. Believing that the hour had struck to try putting into effect the idea that I had long entertained, I determined to act; so one cold night in January, after completing some routine work for the next day, Isat by a blazing fire in my bed-room and wrote an eight-page letter to our representative, Hon. Walter E. Moore, requesting him to introduce a bill providing for the establishment of a Normal Department in connection with an existing centrally situated high school in each Congressional District, such departments to be a u-thorized to train teachers for vilrural public schools and each department to receive annual appropriation of $3,000 for maintenance. The total yearly cost to the State was to be, therefore, $27,000.

My wife and infant son were asleep, but I woke her that she might hear me read the contents of the letter. She expressed approval, cautioning me, however, not to set my heart too hopefully upon success. I lit my lantern and trudged over the frozen ground down the hill to the post office in the John Ensley house across the river. All Cullowhee was wrapped in midnight silence save for the roar of water over the mill-dam.

When Mr. Moore responded that such a bill involving the annual expenditure of $27,000 would, in view of the demands of already established institutions, have little chance of favorable consideration, I then wrote urging that he introduce such a bill providing for the establishment of a Normal Department in connection with Cullowhee High School, the appropriation therefor to be $3,000 annually. A study of the State map had shown me that Cullowhee was the geographical center of about fifteen counties in the extreme western end of the State.

In response to my second letter, Mr. Moore promptly informed me that he had introduced, in accordance with my ideas, a bill to establish the department at Cullowhee, supported by a yearly allowance of $2,000, and that he would do his best to s secure enactment. In committee, the amount for maintenance was cut to $1,500, and, later, the bill, thus amended, became law.

Those most active in behalf of the bill were the PART IN THE ELECTION following: Walter E. GAMPAIGN OF WALTER E. MOORE. Moore, of Jackson; Judge

Allen, of Wayne; John W. Starnes, of Buncombe; Martin H. Holt, of Guilford, and Senator R. L. Leatherwood, of Swain.

Ideas are like multiplying onions. The "Cullowhee idea" spread, giving to Mr. D. D. Dougherty, of Boone, in 1902, the suggestion of establishing the Appalachian Training School (now a college); and the same idea entered into the creation of East Carolina Training School (now a college) in the passage of the State High School Act, in 1907; and still later in the provision made for teacher-training in accredited high schools, the "Cullowhee idea" received further approval.

The session 1893-'94 started off with the newly created Normal Department under direction of Prof. Ernest P. Mangum. In May, 1894, twelve students, having completed the prescribed course, were granted three-year first-grade certificates valid in any county in the State. Another wing had been added to our main building to provide class-room for the teacher-training department. The structure was then in the shape of a Latin cross and contained four rooms. But we still had only a quarter-acre campus which restricted outdoor activities mostly to leap-frog, mumble-peg, tap- WRITES TO HON WALTER E MOORE nastics, and limited military drill. On one side of us was the Baptist Church property, including the house of worship, the cemetery, and a site for the future parsonage, and no land to spare. On the other side lay the favorite farm of David Rogers, an aged, intelligent bachelor and wealthy landowner. He was, from the very first and for many years, averse to parting with much or any of his land for public purposes; but he did, in 1890-91, permit us to erect our fine arts building on a small corner of his land, and, in 1903, after holding us off for two years, he did give us three acres including the last-named building site and providing a site for our first State building. erected in 1903-04, at a cost of $7,500. It was later called the "Madison Building" and served most usefully for thirty-four years, having been razed last year to furnish the site for a new dormitory.

In 1905, the name of the institution was changed to Cullowhee Normal and Industrial School and all its property was conveyed to the State. In 1907 and 1909, State appropriations were made that provided (1) for the erection and furnishing of Davies Hall, first used as a girls' dormitory, and (2) for a new heating plant.

Prior to the erection of these buildings I had obtained legislative authority empowering our Board to procure, by purchase or condemnation proceedings, additional land or lands for the use of the school. Pursuant thereto, we purchased about twenty acres —twelve from David Rogers and eight from Tom Davis, colored. Upon this land, Davies Hall, Joyner Building, and Moore Dormitory were later built.

Professor A. C. Reynolds became president in 1912 and for eight years ably directed the development of the school, extending the curriculum and enlarging the area of patronage. In 1913, the Joyner Building was erected and has functioned since as the administration center.

I was recalled to the presidency in 1920, resigning in 1923 but continuing in service here as a teacher. In 1936, I was retired from active duty with the title of President-Emeritus. Within the three-year period mentioned above, the institution received what, up to 1923, was its largest appropriations, making possible the construction of and the Moore Dormitory and the acquisition of the college farm.

To carry this institution through the various crises from 1893 to 1921, it required to years of per-kept the institution where it is. Its permanency was at no time assured until the Morrison administration when (in 1921 and 1923) State appropriations for Cullowhee aggregated nearly a half-million dollars.

The past sixteen years under the masterly direction of President H. T. Hunter, the institution has experienced amazing growth and progress. The two-year college has become a four-year college, making marvelous strides each session, ranking with the best of its kind in the nation, and receiving now for maintenance and enlarged facilities the largest appropriations ever allotted to this institution—more than $600,000.

In 1925, the name was changed to Cullowhee State Normal School; and, in 1929, to Western Carolina Teachers' College, with authority to the institution to grant degrees.

Today, this unique college, preparing to celebrate its semi-centennial, is in the midst of its most wonderful season of expansion.

Never has it enjoyed greater prestige; never have its prospects been greater.

DEDICATION

UNWAVERING interest in the student body, enthusiastic support of the Catamounts, loyalty supreme, a life devoted to the development and upbuilding of Western Carolina Teachers College—such are the merits that have won our hearts and led us to dedicate this edition of THE CATAMOUNT to Ralph Coleman Sutton.

LOOKING FIFTY YEARS AHEAD

THE STAFF of the Annual is wisely placing emphasis in this issue on the fifty eventful years since the founding of Western Carolina Teachers College. We look back over this half century with pardonable pride. It gives one no little joy to think that he has had a share, however small, in the achievements of the College thus far. We anticipate with unalloyed eagerness the celebration this fall of our Golden Jubilee. It should appropriately crown the fruitful five decades of consecrated labor.

But this pause to celebrate the past finds us on a vantage point from which to envision the future. What of the next fifty years? We are entering the threshold of the second half century full of buoyant hope. Present circumstances would seem to augur well for the future of the College: an enlarged physical plant, growing student body, higher academic standards, increasing recognition in the educational world, encouraging signs of liberality from the Legislature. What more could we ask? But these are more or less visible, measurable signs of something physical. With a college as with an individual, life is more than meat. The institutional spirit transcends mere size in genuine values. Service overtops enrollment, even salaries.

what kind of services may we hope to render in the next fifty years? No one can say without being a prophet. But this is an impressive fact: Western North Carolina seems to be on the verge of great developments. The tide of tourist travel is setting strongly toward the hills. A remaking of social and economic life, a more intelligent farm life, improved homes, enlarged horizons, perhaps unwonted leisure, seem inevitable. All of which mean a new and vital culture in the mountains. A college situated as is Western Carolina Teachers College can not, if it would, remain outside the current of this expanding life. The College must share in this progress, indeed must become a directive force helping to usher in the richer civilization in the highlands. That's what I see in the next fifty years.

CAMPUS SNAPSHOTS

CLASS HISTORY

ESTERN CAROLINA TEACHERS COLLEGE will not soon forget the class of '39. In many phases of campus life it has been a pioneer. Its influence will be felt, and precedents which it has established will remain long after the names of its members have become a matter of office records only. The following summary represents the high points in the history of the senior class of 1939.

1935-1936

SEPTEMBIR: 132 freshmen register for the fall quarter.

October: Class officers elected. Harold Parker, president; Weaver Allen, vice-president; Catherine Yoder, secretary-treasurer. Buster Dandelake was later elected vice-president to succeed Weaver Allen who became president when Harold Parker withdrew from school.

February: The elass sponsored the first Keno Party ever held on the campus. In variety and value of the prizes offered and in the money made it has not been eelipsed.

APRIL: The freshmen won the decision on "Stant Night" with We Shall Have Onions. The east was composed of Pearl Coggins, Jane Hunter, Buster Dandelake, and Gray Hampton.

Freshman ball. This was the first class on the campus to use an orehestra for a dance. Jane Hunter, Buster Dandelake, and Pearl Coggius were the committee in charge.

Weaver Chapman and John E. Crutehfield were elected as sophomore members of the Student Senate.

MAY: Sophomore class officers elected. John E. Crutchfield, president; Elvira Greenlee, vice-president; Edith Wilson, secretary-treasurer.

Pearl Coggins was elected a member of the court of the May Queen, the only freshman to be accorded this honor.

1936-1937

NOVEMBER: Buster Dandelake was given all-eonference honors in football.

MARCH: Frank Long was recognized as an outstanding basketball player by the North State Conference.

April: John E. Crutehfield, Charles Holloman, and Hannah Lou Brown were elected as junior members of the Student Senate. Thelma Galloway and Virginia Hall were appointed as members to the same body.

Charles Holloman was elected as president of the student body. He was the first junior ever to be accorded this honor.

MAY: Junior elass officers elected: John E. Crutchfield, president; Thelma Galloway, vice-president; Lillian Wyatt, secretary-treasurer.

Bleaea Dee Painter was elected as maid-of-honor to the May Queen. Raehael Coward was elected as a member of the court.

Elvira Greenlee was elected vice-president of Moore House Government.

Lillian Wyatt was elected editor of The Western Carolinian.

APRIL: Junior-Senior banquet and ball. The voyage motif was used in the decorations. The entire gymnasium was transformed into a huge ship. This was also the last ball to be held in Madison Building.

Charles Holloman, Virginia Hall. Hannah Lou Brown, and Buster Dandelake were elected as senior members of the Student Senate. Thelma Galloway, Elvira Greenlee, and Edna Allen were appointed as members of the senate.

Charles Holloman was re-elected president of the student body.

MAY: Senior elass officers elected: John E. Crutchfield, president; Thelma Galloway, vice-president; Raehael Orr, secretary-treasurer.

Edith Wilson was elected editor of The Western Carolinian.

Hannah Lou Brown was elected editor of The Catamount; Everett Wall was elected business manager of the same publication.

Pearl Coggins was elected maid-of-honor to the May Queen. Virginia Hall and Callie Abernathy were elected members of the court.

Elvira Greenlee was elected president of Moore House Government, and Laverne Israel was elected vice-president.

1938-1939

SEPTEMBER: Buster Dandelake was elected editor of THE CATAMOUNT to fill the vacancy created when Hannah Lou Brown completed her undergraduate work during the summer.

John E. Crutehfield was elected as a senior member to the Student Senate to fill the vacancy ereated by Hannah Lou Brown's graduation.

OCTOBER: Dan Cooke was appointed business manager of The Western Carolinian to fill the vacaney created when John H. Gesser withdrew from school.

FEBRUARY: Senior superlatives were elected: Charles Holloman, best all-round boy student; Edith Wilson, best all-round girl student; Vera Jones, girl with the most personality; Buster Dandelake, boy with the most personality; Malissa Godwin, most beautiful girl; Dan Cooke, most handsome boy; Raehel Orr, most popular girl; John E. Crutehfield, most popular boy.

JUNE: After commencement, what?

The Catamounts, composed mostly of freshmen, were small and inexperienced, but they were very much improved by the end of the season. There were nineteen Freshmen on the squad and eight of the varsity were playing their first year. The team loses only one man through graduation and prospects are bright for a larger and more experienced team next

BASKETBALL

The Basketball team experienced a very successful season, breaking even by winning and losing eleven games. With only one man back from last year's team prospects did not look bright, but four freshmen came through in such fine style that the Catamounts were feared throughout the conference. The team does not lose a man through graduation and basketball prospects are very bright for the future.

(1) Lee, (2) Tomberlin, (3) Bryant, (4) Rowe, (5) Howard, (6) Plemmons, (7) Griffin, (8) Carter, (9) Hampton, (10) Robinson, (11) Ardrey, (12) Ellis, (13) Cowan, (14) Maney, (15) White, (16) Meredith, (17) Jimison, (18) Traino, (19) Lanier.

BASEBALL

With six lettermen back from last year's team, baseball prospects are bright for this year. There are about thirty boys out for the team and rivalry is very keen for positions on the varsity. Competition seems to be about evenly divided for positions, and it appears that there will be plenty of reinforcements for the varsity men.

We think you have done a swell job in the material you have used in this book.

We have only acted as architect and builder in the production of this book. We sincerely appreciate the opportunity this has afforded us, and trust that we have properly interpreted your dreams of a book worth while.

We hope the book will be received by the Faculty and Student Body with full approval and appreciation, which will be a just reward for a job well done.

Sincerely yours,
